

Programmable Surgical Instrument SystemABSTRACT

[00033] A surgical tool system comprises a first hand instrument including a first signature discrete circuit element and a control console connected to the first hand instrument. The control console includes a memory device and instructions for identifying and controlling a plurality of hand instruments, including the first hand instrument. The first signature discrete circuit element is detected by the control console for identifying the first hand instrument.